

PROTESTANT CHURCH DEAD, SAYS PASTOR

The Rev. John Haynes Holmes
Would Scrap Everything and Start Again.

SEEKS NEW REFORMATION

Will Soon Publish Book on Collapse of Organized Religion
Since the War.

An attack on the churches, their creeds, denominationalism, and about everything that has become a part of church worship is in the hands of the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, minister of the Community Church, New York City. His book, "The Protestant Church Dead," is expected to be published soon. It contains a levelled principal against the Protestant churches. His idea is that they are so far out of date that it would be well to scrap them all and substitute religious institutions erected on the lines of his own Community Church. In his preface, which precedes his foreword, he says:

"The present volume is concerned neither with lamentations nor exhortations. Its purpose is not to bring comfort to churches as they exist to-day. On the contrary, it is written in the deliberate conviction that these churches as organizations are an intolerable interference with the program of modern life, and are therefore to be transformed or replaced as speedily as possible; that Protestantism in all its forms, both orthodox and liberal, is as dead a religion to-day, and therefore as superstitious a social influence, as was medieval Catholicism in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries; that we are living in an age when new religious forces are everywhere breaking into conscious life, and therefore should prepare for the coming of a new reformation."

The Dying Invalid.
In his first chapter on "The Collapse of the Churches," Mr. Holmes refers to the expected religious revival after the war, but finds it didn't materialize. He adds:

"On the contrary, the churches were never before so weak, the tide of spiritual life never before running at so low an ebb. To our sorrow we are forced to acknowledge that the declining vitality of organized religion has ended in this war period, not in recovery, but in collapse."

It is very bad, says Mr. Holmes, in the rural districts, where "Sunday worship is feebly and discouragingly sustained by members of the older generation," but not so apparent in the cities, especially in the cities where there is wealth "which builds and maintains churches in the easiest way of building and maintaining any other kind of building, and which is able to support the most elaborate and costly religious edifices, and to support them in the most elaborate and costly manner."

But the disintegration is in progress in the cities, nevertheless, says Mr. Holmes, and "these things of splendor are like the hectic flush on the cheeks of a dying invalid." "Furthermore," a well defined process is now under way which, if continued to its logical end, would mean the disappearance of churches altogether from the modern city."

The Rising Generation.

The writer goes on to speak of gifts of money to the churches from the wealthy and of the denominational organizations through which such gifts pass. He dwells on the fact that churches of to-day are not self-supporting, and that this is a very unhealthy sign. So, too, is, in his mind, the fact that so few young men are entering the ministry, as figures from the theological seminaries show. He cannot believe that economic conditions explain this, for he says:

"Who that knows the idealism of many of our American youth can believe that the financial problem is anything more than a complicating feature of the situation? Are men refusing to seek positions on the faculties of our colleges and universities because the pay of a teacher is only a little higher than that of a clerk? No, says Mr. Holmes, the fact is that the rising generation has no confidence in the efficacy and worth of the churches as they exist to-day, and the passing generation is steadily losing the confidence which once it had. Church members are strangely akin to political office holders—few die and none resign. The membership rolls 'duplicate the lists of inmates in the old lunatic hospital' and complete shamefully with the headstones in the cemeteries." Further, the preacher had once a position guaranteed, while now "the garb of the priest has become more an occasion for scorn than for reverence."

The New Scientists.

The trouble, says Mr. Holmes, is that the churches "are identified with ideas and practices of life in which the modern man has not the slightest interest. By what imaginable reversion of attention can persons who have learned the lessons of Newton and Darwin, and are now sitting at the feet of Bergson and Einstein, be persuaded to hold interest in affirmations of the Trinity, the Atonement, the Resurrection, Redemption, Salvation and the rest—much less to express their spiritual ideals in terms of these conceptions?" "But what do we find in the Sunday schools? Study of Israelites, Canaanites, Midianites, Edomites, of no more importance to us than Scythians and Babylonians? Study of Biblical legends, about as essential to the modern mind as Greek mythology or Scandinavian lore? Study of the life of Jesus in terms of miracle and wonder, unchanged by anything that has happened since the days of Strauss?" In another place he says:

"The Bible is not a sacred book, save as all great literatures may be deemed from their origin in human suffering and aspiration to be sacred. It is a collection of books having a distinctive character; but, in essence, in no wise different from the literatures produced by any other people of ancient or modern times."

SURFACE CAR KILLS WOMAN.

Third Avenue Traffic Delayed 20 Minutes by Accident.

Surface traffic on Third avenue was tied up for twenty minutes last night while firemen of Hook and Ladder No. 7 jacked up a trolley car and removed from its forward truck the body of an unidentified woman aged about 60. The victim died a short time after she had been received at Bellevue Hospital. Ralph Vitale, the motorman, assured the police that the accident was unavoidable.

VETERAN, 84, LOST ON TRIP TO HOME FOR OLD SOLDIERS

Warren Dodge, Who Fought With the 14th N. Y. Infantry in Civil War, Carried Three $100 Bills and a Letter of Identification.

The Travelers' Aid Society picked him up in Grand Central Station, so old and feeble, he couldn't remember where he was or where he had been since he left home, except he had been "riding on the train." He started for the Old Soldiers' Home in Johnson City, Tenn., he said. Inside his vest was one of the nicest plated badges Grand Army veterans wear, inscribed:

"Warren Dodge, Company B, 14th N. Y. Infantry."
There were railroad tickets from Washington to New York and New York to Albany and a baggage check to Johnson City pinned in his pocket. In the lining of his coat the agent found three $100 bills and this letter:

"Dear Sir or Madam: Please let me know if my father, Warren Dodge, arrives at Johnson City all safe, as I am worried about him going so far, and oblige his daughter."
They took him to the society's headquarters at 465 Lexington avenue and there, bit by bit, he told his story.

Last Tuesday—or maybe it was Monday—the old man left his son's home in Adams, Mass.—he thought it was Adams, perhaps it was Albany, N. Y.—anyway, when he left he had seven $100 bills. He was sure there had been seven bills because his daughter had pinned them in his pockets. He gave one to a taxicab man, but he didn't remember whether he became of the others. He had been in Washington and spent the night in the station and another night on the train. He had been in other places too, and on several trains. He had to take another train now, he said, and he began to cry a little when they took away his crutches.

They gave him some supper and let him smoke his pipe, although that's against the rules, and pretty soon he forgot his troubles and began to talk about the war—The War, not the little mess we had a year or so ago with Germany. He said he was 84 years old.

"My oldest boy—he's almost as old as I be," he added proudly.

So they got him to bed and sent a wire to his daughter in Albany, and he will make a fresh start for Johnson City.

FOX HILLS PATIENTS HEAR OF U. S. PLANS

Col. Forbes Expects Hospital to Be Empty This Month—
Few Would Leave N. Y.

Col. Charles R. Forbes, head of the War Veterans Bureau, visited the hospital at Fox Hills yesterday and told the 88 men there of the Government's plans for the evacuation of the hospital and their transfer to other institutions.

Col. Forbes expects that the abandonment of Fox Hills will be completed by the end of the month.

He told the men that the Government is spending $1,000,000 a day on hospitalization and vocational training and that he hopes soon to get another appropriation for the extension of the hospital plans.

Before Col. Forbes's arrival yesterday a petition was sent to the War Veterans Bureau in Washington, signed by about 60 per cent. of the patients at Fox Hills, asking that the abandonment of the hospital be postponed until a permanent hospital could be erected in New York.

Most of the men at Fox Hills come from this vicinity, and many feared that they might be scattered all over the country. Col. Forbes asked how many of the men wanted to be sent to hospitals in New York and more than 600 stood up. Twenty-nine favored hospitals in California and three in Denver.

Col. Forbes said that approximately 600 of the men will be transferred to hospitals in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx. Bellevue, he said, would take care of 100 and the Naval Hospital in Brooklyn 200 more. By April 1 the new veterans' hospital in The Bronx can take care of the rest.

Col. Forbes explained that the abandonment of the Fox Hills institution was to get all patients into fireproof buildings of such construction that they could receive the best of care.

The men going to Brooklyn and Manhattan will be transferred this week.

DIDN'T SLASH MOTHER; ONLY PUNCHED HER JAW
White Plains Youth Gets Six Months for $25 Theft.

Salvatore Zito, 18, when arraigned on charges of assault and petit larceny at White Plains yesterday, denied the accusation of his mother that he had slashed one of her arms with a knife, adding that he had only punched her on the jaw.

The mother, Mrs. Gracie Zito, told the court that after attacking her the boy went to her grocery store and took $25 from the cash register. Judge Stephen Holden imposed a six months' penitentiary sentence on the petit larceny charge. Sentence was suspended on the assault charge.

BALL OF PRINTERS' AUXILIARY.

The women's auxiliary of "Big Six" Typographical Union held its twelfth annual concert and ball in Shield's Hall, Schermerhorn and Smith streets, Brooklyn, last evening. More than 1,500 members and friends of the union attended. Following a concert by the Big Six Band there was dancing, with music by Hanson's Band.

HELD IN FRIENDS' KILLING.

Salvatore Longo, aged 43, of 331 Hillwell avenue, Brooklyn, was held out last night in Chief Magistrate's court, charged with having shot and killed Ventrano Straniero of the same address in an altercation at Neptune and Canal avenues, Brooklyn, Thursday night. Longo and Straniero were friends. Longo is said to have accidentally shot Straniero in attempting to shoot another man in an altercation.
